

GM CONSULTING RETAINER SERVICES - FACT SHEET

Health and Safety is often complex and always time consuming. Trying to keep up with the latest changes to legislation and approved guidance is increasingly difficult with more European Standards being adopted and implemented. The Government has recognised that much of this 'red tape' has a detrimental effect on the performance of British industry and has started to peel away what they see as unnecessary requirements. Health and Safety is included in this simplification of the business environment and the Government proposes to streamline health and safety regulations. It currently appears that their plans are to keep the principal legislation in place but remove some of the regulations and guidance. Despite the lack of support from the safety institutions, employers can expect to have the same overall health and safety responsibilities but instead of providing guidance on how to meet these responsibilities they will be left to their own devices. This is expected to result in significant confusion and perhaps either a lowering of health and safety standards (along with an increase in enforcement, fines, accidents and incidents) or an increase in control methods out of all proportion to the risks involved (added costs and inefficiencies).

GM consulting will take away the headaches of compliance and ensure your business or organisation is taking all reasonably practicable precautions to minimise risk to your employees and others. By paying a monthly subscription, GM consulting will become your competent person and undertake key health and safety tasks (dependent on the support level required). We can devise a complete safety management system for your organisation and oversee it's implementation, monitor and review it's performance. Alternatively, if your only need is to have access to an e-mail information line or a phone number for advice than this can also be accommodated. By including technical services from Green Man Compliance, the overall package can actually save money for many clients. Additionally, our retainer clients can benefit from reduced price health and safety training to ensure their legal commitment to provide adequate training and instruction is more cost effectively met.

Our service is personal to your organisation and does not rely on on-line tools and generic forms or policies. We will visit your site and agree the extent of our support and the degree of involvement with your key personnel. We know that one size does not fit all and your retainer agreement will be tailored to your exact business needs. GM Consulting effectively becomes one of your employees and we work seamlessly alongside your staff to provide the agreed support.

Small businesses have to juggle many things and health and safety is one such non-core activity that takes precious resources. We would be delighted to meet with you for a 'no obligation' discussion and you can find out how we can alleviate the stressful problem of health and safety and, quite possibly, save you money into the bargain!
